INTRODUCTION

New Horizons, a federal program for senior citizens, received its first request to assist with publication of a community history in November, 1972, only a few weeks after the program itself was established.

Now, 10 years later, more than 400 community histories have been published, approximately 200 are under preparation, and interest among senior citizens in producing them remains strong.

These histories are much more than reminiscences. In giving us first-person accounts of their experiences in settling the country, and in delving deeper into the personal lives of early Canadians than professional historians do, the authors of these books are presenting us with a record of the origins of a nation such as few countries possess.

Senior citizens' interest in preserving our history extends to many areas. With New Horizons assistance they have undertaken more than 200 projects to restore old railway and farm machinery, tools, household items, buildings, cemeteries, artifacts, and historical trails and landmarks. They have restored and developed historical sites and erected cairns, established museums, produced replicas of 17th century costumes, and revived legends and dying languages, folklore, crafts and traditions. They have taped histories, preserving not only the experiences but also the voices of our pioneers, and have produced collections of early Canadian recipes and songs.

INTRODUCTION

Nouveaux Horizons, un programme fédéral à l'intention des personnes âgées, a reçu sa première demande d'aide à la publication de l'histoire d'une collectivité en novembre 1972, à peine quelques semaines après la création du programme lui-même.

Maintenant, dix ans plus tard, plus de 400 histoires locales ont été publiées, environ 200 sont en préparation et l'intérêt reste grand chez les personnes âgées quand il s'agit de préparer de tels travaux.

Ces histoires sont beaucoup plus que des réminiscences. En nous donnant des récits de première main de leurs expériences de la colonisation du pays et en examinant la vie personnelle des premiers Canadiens plus en profondeur que ne le font les historiens, les auteurs de ces livres nous présentent un rapport sur les origines d'une nation que peu de pays peuvent se targuer de posséder.

L'intérêt manifesté par les personnes âgées à l'égard de la préservation de notre passé s'étend à de nombreux domaines. Avec l'aide de Nouveaux Horizons, elles ont entrepris plus de 200 projets de restauration de vieilles machines servant aux chemins de fer et en agriculture, d'outils, d'objets domestiques, d'anciennes constructions, de cimetières, d'objets fabriqués, de sentiers historiques et d'endroits remarquables. Les personnes âgées ont restauré et mis en valeur des lieux historiques et érigé des cairns, fondé des musées, fabriqué des répliques de costumes du 17^{e} siècle et fait revivre des légendes et des idiomes, ainsi que le folklore, l'artisanat et les traditions. Elles ont enregistré des récits, préservant de cette façon non seulement les expériences mais aussi la voix de nos pionniers et elles ont préparé des collections d'anciennes recettes canadiennes et de chansons du passé.

In the course of these activities, senior citizens have spent thousands of hours in planning, travelling and interviewing, in retrieving photographs and documents from attics and church and government archives, in writing, editing and proofreading, and in exhausting physical labour.

Their achievements in preserving our history are second only to their achievements in shaping it.

This booklet lists the titles and nature of content of the community histories which have been published. Further information on the books is available from:

Key to Content of Community Histories

While the events and experiences described in these volumes are as different as their authors and localities, their content basically falls into nine categories:

Local	(1)	La localité
Regional	(2)	La région
Family	(3)	La famille
Social	(4)	La société
Occupational	(5)	Le travail
Ethnic	(6)	Le groupe ethnique
Industrial	(7)	L'industrie
Biographical	(8)	La biographie
Poetry/Fiction	(9)	La poésie et la fiction

Pour réaliser toutes ces activités, les personnes âgées ont consacré des milliers d'heures à planifier, voyager et interviewer, à chercher des photos et des documents dans les greniers et les archives des paroisses et du gouvernement, à écrire, préparer et corriger des textes, ce qui représentait souvent un travail physique épuisant.

Leurs réalisations pour la sauvegarde de notre histoire ne sont surpassées que par leurs exploits pour la façonner.
